

Congressman Castle Issues Warning About Inauguration Tickets (WMDT)

November 10, 2008

President-elect Barack Obama won't be sworn-in to office for over two months but talk of inaugural ticket scams are already circulating.

Congressman Mike Castle is warning Americans that tickets will not be for sale. He says his office has already gotten multiple requests for tickets. He recommends viewing the ceremony from the National Mall.

The theme for this year's ceremony will be "A New Birth of Freedom." It's based on Lincoln's Gettysburg Address in celebration of his 200th birthday.
